FACTS:

According to legend, the blue ribbon origins can be traced back to England's King Edward III in the 14th century. One evening at a gala court ball, a lady lost her blue garter on the dance floor. The King picked up the garter and, noting the crowd staring at him, defiantly put it on his own leg, announcing "Shame on him who thinks evil of it." Whatever the truth of this story, Edward III did establish the Order of the Garter as the most honored order of knighthood, and to this day members wear a ribbon of blue silk on their lapels. Just like the prize hogs at the State Fair.
